The main purpose of Britain's air expansion was to provide defence against aerial attack.

"It is our aim and purpose to develop as a deterrent as powerful a striking force as we can. In speed and capacity and range," said Sir Thomas, "our machines are not inferior to any abroad."

Behind the Air Force were other measures to complete Britain's defence, guns, searchlights and other technical equipment. An extensive balloon barrage was contemplated for the protection of London.

Next year, he said, would see an | _____ increased aircraft output, which had been already begun, extending in anincreasing scale until 1940." The Government factory at Notlingham would begin production in six weeks

He refused to believe that another war was inevitable if Great Britain took the proper measures, but if Britain were ever involved in another war she would never give up until she was safe again. That meant that she would make her maximum effort until victory was complete.

The Government had decided not to appoint a Ministry of Supply in the absence of cogent proof that such an appointment was necessary. This decision would be reviewed periodic-

The Minister concluded by reminding the House that the rearmament programme was placing a stupendous strain on the finances of the country. If the Government were to interrupt peace-time industry, it would run the risk of descroying the nation's financial fabric.

"When all is said and done," he said, "we have a long start over anyone ill-advised enough to meddle Navy. with our freedom. And if we care to use our resources I don't see any reason why that freedom should be leopardised."-Reuter Special.

Gravity Not Questioned

London, Nov. 10. Winding up the defence debate in the House of Commons to-day, Sir Samuel Hoare recalled that no speaker in the debate had questioned the gravity of the situation or the nced for rearmament. International disarmament discussions, he said, cannot begin upon a status quo. The question must be discussed upon a basis of a proper standard of security for Britain and the Empire, he said.

26,000-ton battleship launched last month, is now being constructed at Kiel, and in addition there is one Sir Samuel denied the assertion that the country was vastly behindhand with its air programme. Present conditions in this respect were satisfactory.

With regard to the "shadow indutry," us it is called, by which scheme each of a number of manufacturers turn out single aeroplane parts, Sir Samuel asserted that when the firms had fairly started it was intended to give them further machine-tools so that In the event of an emergency they could carry out the whole pro-Though progress had been made, Reuter.

FOUR ADMIRALS AT CEREMONIES

IMPRESSIVE SERVICES

Armistice Day, marking the anniversary of the end of the World War, is being observed throughout the world to-day. In Hongkong, the ceremony at the Cenotaph was both simple and inspiring, and unusual significance was given the occasion by the presence of four Admirals, which probably constitutes a record for such an occasion in this Colony. They were His Excellency Vice-Admiral Sir Charles Little, C.-in-C. of the China Station, His Excellency Vice-Admiral H. E. Yarnell, C.-in-C. of the United. States Asiatic Fleet; His Excellency Vice-Admiral Esteva, C.-in-C. of the French Asiatic Fleet, and Rear-Admiral C. G. Sedgwick (Retired), Commodore.

A street sale of popples on behalf of Earl Haig's Fund was also held.

As on previous occasions, large crowds gathered round the neighbourhood of the Cenntaph from an early hour, while the balconies of the Hongkong Club, the verandahs of the Supreme Court and other points of vantage were thronged with

The clergy, headed by Bishop H. Valtorta, the Rev. H. W. Baines and Rev. K. Mackenzie-Dow, and the white-surpliced choir, made un arresting mark in the vari-coloured pattern in which flashed conspicuously the polished bugies of the bands. At a quarter to eleven, all troops and representatives were in position, and while the last officials were taking their places, the pipers of the Hongkong Volunteer Defence Corps played a Lament.

THE SILENCE

His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, arrived and soon as he had taken his stand on the south side of the Cenotaph, attended by Senior Naval, Military and Air Force Officers and by members of the Executive and Legislative Councils, the Judges and Senior Members of the Government, a naval gun announced the hour of 11 A deep and solemn silence fell on the square like a montle, undisturbed by the faint rustlings of the crowds and the distant' streets, never wholly silent. For two minutes all thought was as one. . Another boom and the spell was broken, followed immediately by the sounding of "The Last Post" by the buglers of the 1st Battalion Royal Ulster Rifles. The massed bands of the 2nd Battalion East Lancashire Regiment and the 1st Battalion Royal Ulster Rifles then led the singing of "O God Our Help in Ages Past." There followed the prayer and blessing by the clergy, after which the buglers of the 1st Battalion Royal Ulster Rifles sounded the awakening notes of "The Reveille."

Following the playing of the National Anthem by the massed bands, His Excellency mounted the Cenotaph steps and laid a wreath at the bas of the Monument. He was followed by the Heads of the three Services, (Continued on Page 5.)

ings will help to give her an appearance of height from shoe to skirt hem.

Then as to her frock (see next figure)-pleats, and pleats, and more pleats. But they should not start too high-the hips must be outlined slimly.

Now for the tall woman.

For her the new flared, tunic costs have been made, worn with a straight skirt beneath. She'll probably want a high-ish collar, since they're a 1937 note, but let it bend back gracefully. Plain sleeves, fitted-waists, and gallantly dashing look-which the small woman would give her eyes to possess. High hats, yes, but not if they suggest the Eiffel Tower; worn at an angle and with the right trimming. they'll be good. Look at the first of the two lower figures.

Military Touch

Or for a less dressy ensemble she can choose a military looking doublebreasted coat, neat-waisted again, but with a fairly wide skirt. A fur. pocket on the hip, if she is very slender there, will help her (on a sult a jacket with a basque will do the same thing), and she must be careful how her fur collar stands up round her face. The second lower sketch will show you what I mean-and show you, too, how a high-crowned brimmed hat, well chosen, can complete this outfit.

VERNON BARTLETT, the famous corresponmay be terribly exceeded by the dent, recently completed his investigations in Spain and has recrossed the frontier in order to escape the censorship.

The first of his dispatches, sent from Marseilles after spending a night on the deck of a destroyer from Alicante, appears below.

Main points in this important message, which summarises the present military and political situation in Madrid, are:

I am convinced that no combination of aristocrats, or priests and generals are now able to check the revolutionary movement in Spain. Their temporary victory would only make the ultimate swing to the Left more bloody and more ex-

Tragic Lack of Discipline

The Communists and Socialists are at last emphasising the necessity of some organisation of defence.

The Syndicalist and Anarchist organisations, however, do not appear to realise that the lack of discipline is at least as much responsible as lack of aeroplanes and artillery for the failure to struction of a canal between the crush the few thousand rebels whose lines of communication now rivers Vistula and Dniester connectcrush the few thousand rebels whose lines of communication now stretch from the Portuguese frontier almost to the suburbs of

STREET WATERING URBAN COUNCIL

No assurance had yet been given by the water authorities that restrictions had been lifted for all time, 'declared the Chairman of the Urban Council (Mr. R. R. Todd) when he replied yesterday to questions relating to the watering of streets by Dr. R. A. de Castro Basto.

STATEMENT

Dr. Basto asked: (1) Has the Government permanently abandoned the practice of watering the streets in this Colony?

Answer.—The sprinkling of streets with water was abandoned in 1928, but all sidewalks, surface-channels, scavenging lanes and stone steps (with the exception of those on the Peak) are washed once a week.

(2) Is it not feasible to resume it by the employment of water carts? Answer,—The sprinkling of streets by means of water carts is of little benefit except temporarily to lay dust. It is considered that in view of the small amount of dust in the streets the expense would not be justified.

Use of Sca Water

(3) If fresh water is not available throughout the year for this purpose could not a mixture of fresh and sea water be used instead?

Answer.—The use of sea water for sprinkling or flushing the streets has been abandoned because salt water deleteriously affects certain road surfaces and because the use of seawater on the roads causes skidding of motor vehicles. The use of sea water on the upper levels would also. involve the expense of pumping or carling the water to these levels.

(4) If it is thought that water would make the streets slippery, is it not possible to flush them at night? Answer.-While it is not thought that flushing the streets with fresh water would make the streets slippery, to flush them at night would entail the use of extra staff, which is not at present available. I would also point out that no assurance can yet be given by the Water Authority that water restrictions have been lifted for all time. When such an assurance is given the question of flushing the streets as well as washing the sidewalks, surface channels, etc., with main water will be further considered.

NEW BOOK ON CANTON

CONTAINS MUCH OF INTEREST

"Canton, City of Rams" is the title of an interesting little book just published at $2, its author being Mr. Ng Yong-sang. The publication, which is neatly bound in light blue stiff covers, comprises a general description of the Southern metropolis, with a brief historical sketch, as well as four stories from popular Contonese felt-lore.

back to the carllest times, is brief but informative, whilst there is much of a most interesting character both in the section dealing with the city's past and present and in the unofficial guide which comprises the concluding section. The book is illustrated and includes a plan of Canton city.

The historical sketch, which goes a Cricket Ball and a good Whisky?

"A cricket ball," said Johnnie Walker, taking one in his hand, "has got a seam-you can see and feel where the join comes—and so it is with poorly blended whiskies. But a good whisky like Johnnie Walker is somewhat like a billiard ball, perfectly round, perfectly smooth; the blends of rare whiskies are so skilfully 'married' that there are no 'edges' to the whisky.

"It's always worth while saying 'A Johnnie Walker, please,' instead of 'A whisky-and-soda.""

"VICTORY OVER BLINDNESS"

There can be no more fitting occasion than Armistice Day on which to bear in mind the ma 'nificent work being done on behalf of British blinded soldiers, sailors and airmen by St. Dunstan's Home, which has just completed twenty-one years of existence. What this institution has done for those deprived of life's greatest gift in the World War only those who have benefitted therefrom can tell. There are now some two thousand of these war heroes, who, after expert training at St. Dunstan's, live in their own homes. They are not derelicts, but they would be had there been no St. Dunstan's to take them in hand. During the war, whether or not a blinded man availed himself of St. Dunstan's was entirely optional on his part, but the fact remains hat practically every blinded soldier and sallor in all the British Imperial forces-as well as five women, blinded in various forms of active war service-did so. The end of the war did not, as might have been expected, put a stop to the increase in the number of war-blinded men. Not even to-day, eighteen years after the signing of the Armistice, has the sad procession come to an end. In the last three years, 75 new cases of "delayed blindness" have gone to St. Dunstan's, these being directly due to war service, often to the effect of mustard-gas poisoning. The greatest value of the work of St. Dunstan's is undoubtedly to be found in the After-Care Organisation, by which the business, domestic and social interests of the cases are continually watched. In this sphere, St. Dunstan's helps the men to settle in their homes. their businesses and farms, and finds suitable employment for those who have studied massage and telephony. For the most part, those helped live the lives of normal men, with a normal man's interest in work and play; they pull their full weight as citizens, brains as effectively as anyone else. TITLES DECIDED Players Are Promising

(By "Veritas")

For the last five years the Diocesan Boys' School has encouraging tennis among the students, thus pursuing the well defined policy of the school to give the boys every opportunity for developing their athletic prowess.

Last week the fifth annual championships came to a conclusion marking one of the most successful events in the records of the school. No less than 37 players took part in 46 matches over a period of sèven weeks. But more important was the fact that only brie walkover was conceded throughout this extensive programme, while there were only two defaults recorded after one set of play. This is a definite indication of the increased interest and enthusiasm taken by the boys in the

NOT FOR PERSONAL GLORY

It should be pointed out that although there are individual championships, the boys do not particlpate in the events to gain personal glory. All are members of a "House" and their victories mean additional points for that House. The House securing the greatest aggregate of points is adjudged the champion: not the individual player.

This year Yellow House finished top, with Green House (winners last year) running second, Blue third and Brown. House The champions obtained 57 the runners-up 48, Blue House 47 and Brown House 29.

Liem Sick-Hang of Green House retained the senior singles championship, and he is by far the best player in the school, and shows very real promise for a successful future. He met stiff opposition in the semi-final, when against Ip Kee of Wellaw House, the match going the full-distance of three

Some of the tennis was impeccable and right up to Centre Court standard. Tilden again went al out to exhibit his astounding array of shots, and never before in Hongkong has a player been seen to mix 'em as did the former world's champion. Tilden's control over the ball made it appear as though lie had hypnotised it. Again and again he made the chalk rise with perfect length shots down the lines, and he was always trying to break up the rhythm of Vines's game by

Tilden was a great strategist and made such wonderful use of the that it needed a player of Vines's calibre to stand up against such a battery of bewildering shots.

Some of the rallies from backhand corner to backhand corner were object lessons in stroke pro-duction. Both players put into practice the fundamentals of which Tilden spoke at his lecture on Monday and the result was a series of delightful shots, in which rhythm, timing, footwork, weight transference and racket work were perfectly co-ordinated.

The remarkable feature of their ground strokes was the low trajectory gained on every shot. Although the ball was continually taken somewhere about a foot from the ground,

An elaborate plan, aimed to clean up first-class football in England, has recently been put into effect by the English Football Association. Among other things it involves the mingling by Association officials among the crowds on the terraces and in the stands to watch for foul play. A "Black List" of players guilty of foul tactics during matches has already been compiled; in fact it has grown so rapidly that it takes up a complete filing cabinet of names at the Football Association offices in

"BLACK LIST" IS

TABULATED

Each player has his own namecard. They are filed in alphabetical order, and on each card is the record of the player, a list of the cautions he has received, of questionable tricks, and the penalties imposed.

The card of a famous First Division player was pulled out of its place in the cabinet and Mr. F. A. Rous, Sceretary, English F.A., handed it to a reporter.

The man's list of foul play penalties took up all one side of the card and continued on the other side. There must have been a dozen. 🕳

Mr. Rous said: "That is rather an exceptional card. The majority of the others carry only one or two bad marks.

WARNING LETTERS

"Most of the foul play is confined to certain individuals. We have them noted, so have the referees.

"When they are seen resorting to fouls we send their club a warning letter and say, 'Please bring, this to the notice of the player, who should be informed that we record such incidents for future reference.

"But when we have had to send a number of cautions to the same player we let the club have this final notice." Mr. Rous passed me blue printed letter on Football Association notcheading. It read:-

"The referee has reported having cautioned your player during this match. Please bring this to the notice of the player who should be informed that, in view of his record, any further reports of a similar nature will be sent to the Disciplinary Committee for their attention." The F.A. have their own way, too, of finding the men who foul. Their representatives go out to matches every week. They report incidents they see; they report, too, on the referee if necessary.

They are a sort of CID of football Their duty is to note the things that the referee may miss.

Mr. Rous marks his match programmes with pencil ticks against the men he notes fouling. Each foul, "It is all part of our plan to make and keep the game clean," he said.

HOW BOROTRA WAS BEATEN BY KARL SCHROEDER

GLORIOUSMATCH

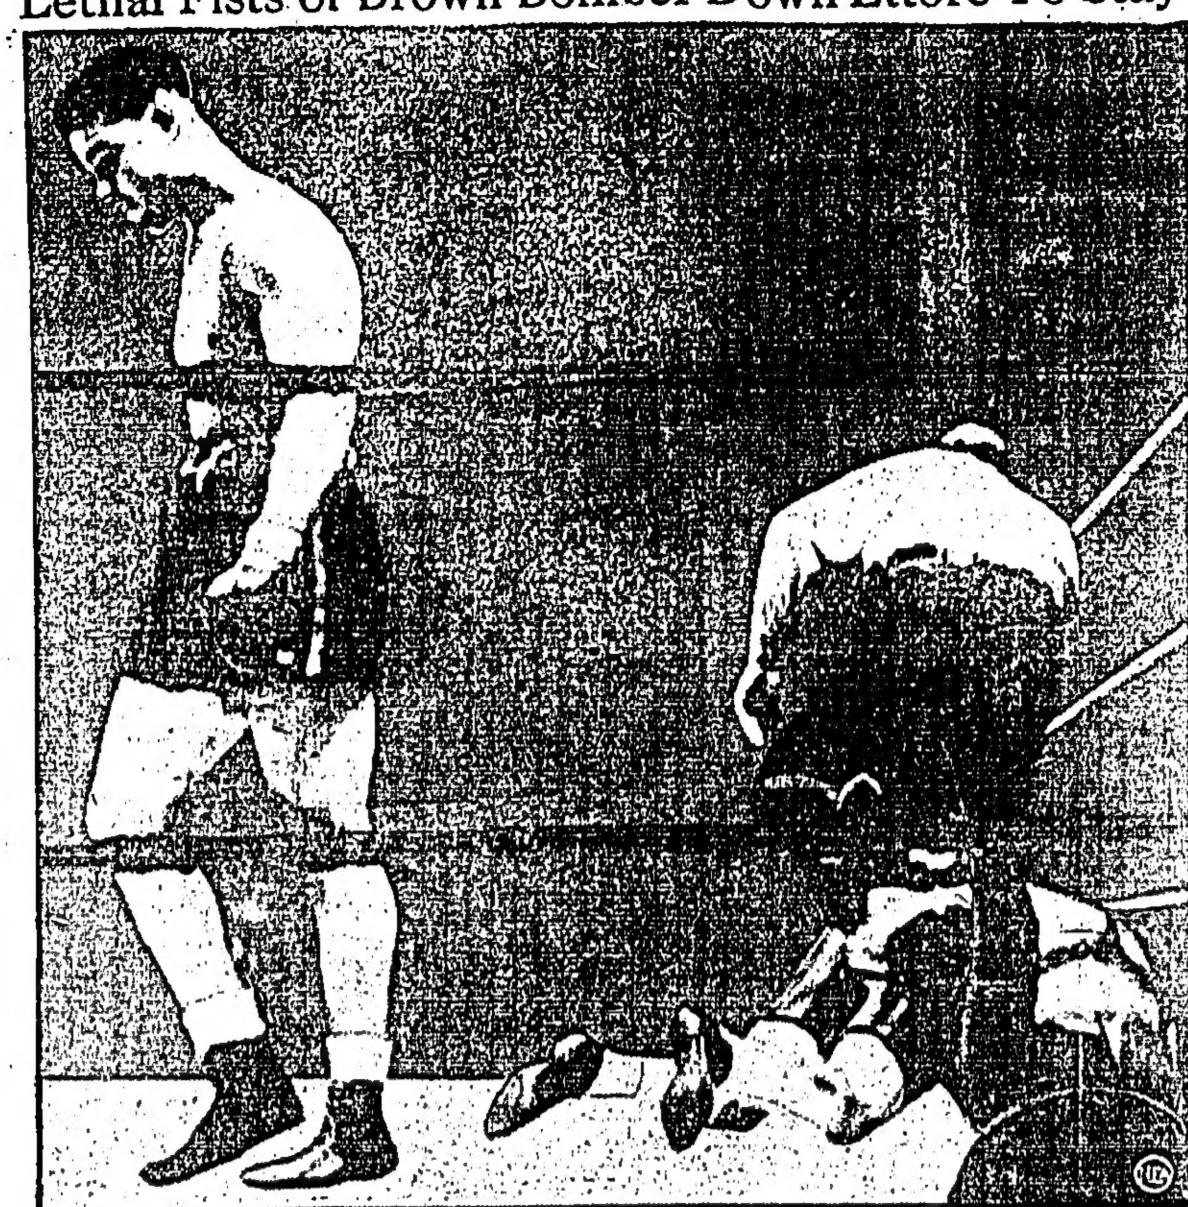

London, Oct. 18. The singles covered court champlouships both went overseas yesterday. One to the far North, taken by Carl Schroder, of Sweden, in a glorious battle with Jean Borotra, the holder; the other to the far South, by Senorita Lizana's victory over Miss Hardwick. Neither winner had ever played at Queen's Club before last Monday; and Senorita Lizana had never played on wood till then: it was a great achievement on her part.

Horotra attacked from the start, and got a 3-2 lead. But he found Schroder every bit as anxious to attack as he was, and soon the Swede, bringing off his best passes when he was hardest pressed, had forged ahead. He led at 5-4, and had three set-points in the tenth game; but Borotra fought desperately, and with some splendid volleying, made it 5-all. Three very long games followed, all of them full of magni-fleent play by both men. Schroder lost his service in the eleventh, after being 40-love in it. Borotra, in his turn, had a set-point in the twelfth, but superb passing shots off the tervice saved Schroder, and at last got ahead at 7-6 and won Borotra's service for the set. The second set was a very different affair. After one—all Schröder went right away largely helped by Borotra serving three "doubles" in succession in the fourth game, and he took the set at 6-1, finishing with a beautiful service ace. BOLT NOT YET SHOT

Borotra's bolt was not yet shot. He led most of the way through the third set, finding his volleying form again, though often beaten by Schroder's dipping drives off the service. When the holder got ahead at 5-4, after a wonderful game, it looked as if it might still be all to play for. But Schroder cool and easy, stuck to his work, and himself led at 7-6, in a game in which, after a rally of miraculous exchanges, Borotra fell up against the back wall. In the next game Schröder had two match-points, losing the first by a double fault (1) and the second by a superb smash from the Frenchman. On they went, the end was near. Borotra ended the next game, after three deuces, with a double fault, and Schröder ran out in the sixteenth. The final of the women's singles was played in the morning, and gave a very decisive victory to Senorita handleap of having been beaten in the Colony in a few years time. already four or five times by the Chilean champion during the summer. With the severer service, the inore sweepingly fluent drive, and three the ability-to-volley, she had three of Senorita Lizana, and her own tendency to overdrive and to serve thirty-five minutes to play: Miss doubles title. Hardwick won three games in the first set, and none in the second:

CINEMA NOTES

The grim, stark tragedy of a condemned man's slow, terrified march to the gallows, along the dread "last mile," is graphically brought to the screen in "I'd Give My Life" gripping new Paramount film based on "The Noose," stage thriller of a decade, which opens to-day at the Queen's Theatre. The story concerns an honest politician was aims to rid his state of gangsters who have invaded his state. The racket chief holding the strongest weapon in the game—the threat of scandal against the Governor's wife! Tom Brown, as the young gang member, is the innocent pawn in the game, and when he discovers that he is about to be used to break a tortured woman's heart, he rebels—prefer-ring to go to the gallows with scaled lips, rather than add to her sorrows. How a telephone call interrupts the dreaded 'last mile' and the surprising climax which is brought about in the Governor's office straightening out the life of four termented lives and bring peace and happiness to the lives of innocent sunerers. Supporting Tom Brown in the east are Sir Guy Standing, Frances Drake, and Janet Beecher. Directed by Edwin L. Marin.

Glorious music, punctuated by one of the oddest detective mysteries ever written into fiction—the murder of a tenor before 20,000 people in the

In introducing Messrs, Tilden and Vines, Mr. Tam said the Club was honoured in being 'able' to entertain such world famed personages. It would be invidious, he said, to make the introductions, for their names were household words throughout the world.

Able Speaker

From the moment Tilden introduced himself as the "man who talks" of tennis, while Vines plays it," he showed himself to be a fluent speaker and launched immediately into a collection of witty incedotes, mostly previously acknowledged with the flavour of the tennis courts, prof. It was a beautiful English day as it had rained for only four hours (laughter) and there was a brilliant gallery present, including their Majesties.—We—had—skated round the court for four sets and I was trailing 3-2 in the fifth when I was trailing 3-2 in the fifth when I served, but Algy returned it with one of those backhand shots for which he was famous. I reached out for it, but saw it pass comfortably underneath my racket. 'A peach!' I cried out in admiration—and then my feet came from under me and I sat down in the best of the Wimbledon mud. As I rose, with my temper none of the best, a voice rang out from the gallery, 'I say, old thing, a little crushed that peach, ch?'" (Laugh-

Stage Interlude

Tilden then recalled an incident that occurred when he attempted. some years ago, to prove to the world that he was an acter. "I was given the part of the good-looking hero," he said, "and about three-quarters of he said, "and about three-quarters of an hour with the make-up box enabled me to look something like it. In the front row were a couple of girls, aged about 16 or 17, and throughout the first act they did nothing but watch me all the time; much to my satisfaction, of course. "In the second act, however, one of them turned to the other, and in a voice that could be heard clearly on the stage, said:

"Another time." Tilden went on, "I was playing in a tournament at Nassaur Club, outside New York City, whose members take things very seriously and guide the social destinies of the district. I was playing against "Pop" Baggs, who was known then as the world's worst known then as the world's worst tennis player, and, believe me, I was giving him a terrific battle for the title. (Laughter). During one of the change-overs a lady approached me and inquired: "Can you tell me when Mr. Tilden will start playing?"
"Heaven only knows," I replied.
"I'm trying to find that out myself."

Mexican Tour

Tilden then switched to Mexico. "We went there with John Hennessy, the man who appeared on the centre court at Wimbledon in striped trousers. Fourteen groundsmen, 10 ball Novs and countless umpires fainted at the sight. John believed in doing in Rome what the Romans did, so in Mexico he began in learning Spanish. His knowledge of the language was "co" and then talk fast.

"We were in one of those beautiful Spanish buildings, with crowds of dainty hostesses, when John, who

It wouldn't have been so bad, but she read somewhere—if you see what she means—that Abyssinia can con-tinue legally as a member of the League in any case. She means, now what on earth did that mean? That is, if the Committee meant anything. Well, I think it meant this. The Emperor Haile Schusie was going to be conducted into such a sweet little theatre and left there for a few minutes with a nice box of chocolates. Then the curtain would rise, disclosing Mr. Eden and all the rest, dressed in ballet skirts, with wands in their hands.

Then Mr. Eden would dance forward on tiptoe and cry, in moving tones; "You DO believe in fairles, don't DEOPLE so rarely behave as they should that I think we must celebrate two examples of perfect proprietary which have come my way. First, Sir Herbert Samuel, in his retirement from public affairs, is writing a book on practical philosophy. Second-and more striking-Mr. William Randolph Hearst, who lintes President Roosevelt and his New Dealers like poison, is coming to London to attend the Antique Dealers' Fair that opens to-morrow.

Description of the part of hospital authorities

Admiral Claude C. Bloch, at present of the child. Even if there was any sent commanding the Second Battlea coolie named Ettle, who lives in a suburb of Madras, and his wife, tract in falling to return their baby tor to them after it had received treatment there.

When the case came up for hearing, it was stated that the coolie took his two-day-old child to the hospital for treatment on or about December 4, 1933, and that the hospital accepted responsibility for treating it and returning it to the plaintiffs, as soon as the treatment was completed.

BABY VANISHES On or about December 11 the nurse in charge of the children's ward told the coolie that the baby had been discharged and someone had taken delivery of it. The coolie, it was stated protested against the delivery of the baby to "unknown, persons," but at the direction of the nurse went home and instituted a search for the missing child. It could not be found.

-The-matter_was_reported_to the police, who after extensive inquiries; informed the parents that the child could not be traced.

The parents stated that the loss of the child was due to the hospital nuthorities negligently delivering the child to unknown persons.

They further stated that the autherities committed a breach of contract in failing to return the child to its parents or their nominees as undertaken by them, and were therefore guilty of misfeasance, non-
